Get Your Students Writing
Presenter, Caitlyn Pezza
Bloomfield Public Library
90 Broad Street, 2nd Floor Boardroom
Bloomfield, NJ 07003
Tuesday, December 17, 2019, 1:00-2:30 pm

Presenter biography:

With a Master of Fine Arts in Creative Writing from The New School, a Master of Science in English Education from The City University of New York, and undergraduate degrees in both Advertising and English from Florida State University, Caitlyn has dedicated herself to inspiring others through the gift of creative writing and progressive education. She has been teaching students of all ages for over 10 years while she also engaged in the roles of English Department Head, Assistant Principal, and Director of Admissions and Outreach at private schools in both Manhattan and New Jersey. Her poetry can be found in The Best American Poetry, Able Muse, The Southeast Review, Espresso Ink, and NPR online.

Workshop description:

Writer, Academic Director, and Founder of the Wizard School, Caitlyn Pezza, teaches this fun, insightful, hands-on workshop highlighting methods to get your students writing: How can we use symbols, imagery, our senses and the resources surrounding us to ignite inspiration in our students? She brings her lens as a poet to offer a perspective on the writer’s role in the world, and how we can use this view to think of new ways to approach the craft, and make getting started a less daunting task. Tutors will come away with a bag of tricks they can begin using immediately that will inspire their students and make writing more accessible, stress-free and enjoyable for them. She will also guide us on how these tools can be used across genres.