Grammar Instruction that Works: Looking at Lessons

Presenter, Catherine Mitch

Platform: Zoom

Thursday, October 19, 2023, 11:00 am – 12:30 pm

Presenter's biography:

The name Catherine Mitch has become quite familiar within the Literacy New Jersey network. Catherine is a former program director for Literacy New Jersey, a non-profit organization that provides free literacy services to adults in 12 New Jersey counties. In that role, she organized and led the organization's Mercer County Programs, overseeing literacy education to county residents.

Catherine has extensive experience as a professor, teacher, and instructor in a career that spanned more than 35 years and brought her to places as local as Rutgers University and Raritan Valley Community College and as distant as a Papua, Indonesia seminary where she taught for three years. Although Catherine recently retired, she continues to maintain a presence in the literacy scene by helping to train teachers and tutors for non-profit organizations, leading educational workshops, and instructing individuals.

Workshop description:

Some of you may have attended my workshop earlier this year which discussed "Grammar Instruction that Works." Thank you! I have since created several grammar intensive lessons which follow the format discussed in that workshop. In this workshop you will have a chance to look at these lessons, give feedback, discuss how you might (or might not) use these lessons with your students, and learn how to create these kinds of lessons yourselves.
